

Scientific Communications for PhD Students

Course description

This course has been designed to provide instruction on scientific communications beyond those of standard manuscript writing for PhD students at any stage of their study.

The following topics will be covered:

- manuscript reviewing,
- responding to manuscript reviews,
- research grant writing,
- communicating to lay audiences, and
- poster making.

The course format will combine theoretical instruction with in-class as well as take-home exercises. The opportunity to work on the student's own material will be provided.
